BURNING CHARCOAL.
GREAT CARE IS NECESSARY TO FIRE A "PIT" SUCCESSFULLY.
Labor is an Important Item in the Preparation of the Product for the Market. Manufacturers Generally Sell Their Own Charcoal.
"Do you keep charcoal?" asked a reporter of a large coal dealer in this city. "No, sir, we do not. I have sold lots of coal in my time, but never a pound of charcoal. I don't even know how it is made."
Leaving the wealthy coal merchant the reporter sought one of those nondescript coal hawkers who make a livelihood by attending to the wants in the way of calorific of the very poor classes in the by streets and alleys.
Having found one of these coal holes the reporter approached the almost carbonized specimen of humanity, who was for the time being resting from his labors, and propounded the question, "What's the price of charcoal?"
"Eight cents a peck," replied a gruff voice, and the little old man straightened himself out with an effort as he stopped filling the peck measure, which he judged to be about the newspaper man's capacity.
"We don't sell much charcoal," he continued, "only in small lots. Some manufacturers buy their charcoal by the great quantity. It is used in large lots by persons who make ice chests and beer coolers, as it is a poor conductor of heat. There's a lining of charcoal three inches thick in all sides of a beer cooler."
"Most country people bring their own charcoal to the city in wagon loads, and sell it for from fifteen cents to twenty cents a bushel. We retail it at about twenty cents to twenty-five cents per bushel, and it is a dull sale at that."
The reporter now left the charcoal man, and approached an individual who had just disposed of a wagon load of the material.
"Yes, I make charcoal," he replied in answer to an inquiry. "In the winter and spring is the time when charcoal is made to the best advantage."
BUILDING THE PILE.
"I am just clearing up a tract of woodland and am turning the refuse to account by manufacturing charcoal. Beech wood and hickory are the best for that purpose. Oak makes a very poor coal, and it is hardly worth burning. Generally the good wood is culled out, and then a huge circular pile is made of the knots and refuse. This pile is often 100 feet in diameter and from ten to fifteen feet in height. The wood is piled with great care in straight rows around a small opening, about one foot in diameter, which is left as a sort of chimney for the fire to be started in.
"As soon as the pile is completed it is covered all over with forest leaves or straw, and then the whole mass is covered with dirt to the thickness of three or four inches. It now resembles a small volcano, especially when the fire is started and the smoke begins to issue from the small opening left in the top. The fire is started by dropping shavings into the chimney which was left in the center, and then lighting them by dropping live coals into the cavity. A few holes are made near the bottom of the pile of dirt in order to create a draft, and as soon as the fire begins to smoke these holes are again closed.
"Now, if everything goes right, the fire is allowed to smoulder away, with just air enough to support combustion. If a high wind should spring up, as it often does, every hole is closed tight to keep down the fire, and very often boards must be laid over the whole pile to keep out the wind. It takes from ten days to two weeks to burn a 'pit,' as it is called, and this time is a period of great anxiety to the charcoal burner, as the operation must be watched night and day, and a little negligence may cause the loss of weeks of hard work.
BURNING THE "PIT."
"As the fire progresses part of the charcoal is consumed by combustion and the remainder shrinks to nearly one-half its original size. The shrinkage, of course, would cause the dirt to be left standing alone provided it would do so. In order to meet this difficulty the tender goes round and round, over and over the pile, packing the dirt with a shovel. This continual packing must not be neglected, for if a cavity should occur and the dirt cave in instantly, the whole pile would burst out into flame which nothing could stop.
"As the burning progresses holes are punched through the dirt in such places as the tender thinks the fire has not yet been. These holes create a draft and at once bring the fire to that part of the pit, upon which the holes are again closed and the charring begins. As soon as the tender thinks that the work is complete he shuts up the chimney and packs every hole. He then spends about two days in packing the dirt, and watches for crevices through which smoke issues and closes them as soon as they are discovered. Barrels of water are now hauled to the pit, and workmen begin to open up a side and take out the charcoal.
If sparks of fire should be found they are at once dashed with water, and as the work progresses water is thrown into the pit, while the steam thus created penetrates to all parts of the coal and lessens the danger of fire. As a rule all the coal is removed at once as a precautionary measure, and every man who has burned a pit is glad when he gets it off his hands. From 700 to 1,000 bushels are made in a pit. This is hauled away in wagon loads of 80 bushels to 100 bushels, and sold for about fifteen cents per bushel. Thus from $120 to $150 is realized on each pit."
According to chemists only 20 to 25 per cent. of the wood remains as charcoal, the rest being driven off as gases. Charcoal is 65 per cent. carbon.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"O, an, let me see, what do you give for a cold on the chest?" asked Jones, in a sort of indifferent tone, of a doctor with whom he was slightly acquainted, as he met him on the street. "African," was the laconic reply. "Do we," he asked you not to neglect that hacking cough and drowsy feeling, the coated tongue, the falling appetite, the indigestion, the general lassitude and debility—that "fired feeling," as so many express it. Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in time, and it will not disappoint. It is not only the most wonderful alternative, or blood-cleanser, known to medical science, but also possesses such a nutritive and tonic power, that it gives strength and improves digestion and builds up both flesh and strength when, from any cause, they are reduced below a healthy standard. It is for Bronchitis, Throat and Lung Diseases, accompanied with lingering coughs, the Golden Medical Discovery is absolutely unequalled as a remedy.
For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Short Breath, Consumptive Night-sweats, and kindred affections, it surpasses all other medicines. It is the only lung remedy, sold by druggists, guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or money refunded.

$500 OFFERED
for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head, by the proprietor of the famous Catarrh Remedy. By its mild, soothing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases, no matter of how long standing. Only 50 cents. Sold by druggists everywhere.
